Pastor's Corner

"Wash me and I will be whiter than snow."
~ Psalm 51:7b

We don't often get the privilege to experience the beauty of this imagery when God says to my sin-stained heart, "you will be clean," and the depth of that cleanness is as pure white as the snow we have seen this year. When there's a heavy snow, it is so white outside that it is nearly blinding at times. That is what He does when we lay our sins before Him in true repentance — He washes us white as snow. What glorious good news!

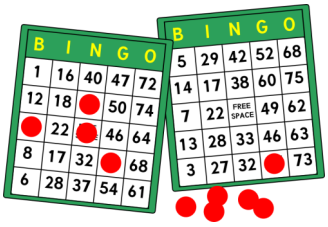

Grace and Peace!

THE ZONE

"Woven in Denim, Sealed in Faith: The Life and Legacy of Bee, and the Question of Eternity"

"For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's."

~ Romans 14:8

There used to be a Levi Strauss Plant in Murphy, NC that employed hundreds of local people. During the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s it was the go-to place for young people - especially recent graduates - who chose not to pursue college. They could stay in their hometown, secure a good-paying job, and plan for retirement.

My grandmother, "Bee," was one of those young people. She started working at Levi's in the early 1970s, and by the time the plant closed in 1999, she had risen through the ranks, and was promoted to the position of manager -- overseeing the entire plant!

Unfortunately, her plant wasn't the only one to face closure that year. Right around the same time, Levi's shuttered 11 of its remaining 22 U.S. plants, resulting in the loss of approximately 5,900 jobs (Greensboro News & Record). People were forced to either find a new job or retire… and Bee chose the latter!

The week the plant closed, the Cherokee Scout, Murphy's primary newspaper, ran a special on the front page. The headline depicted Bee gleefully handing over a set of keys to the mayor. Ironically, in that same edition, just a few pages over, she would also be found in the obituary section. Little did we know, Bee, aged 56, would succumb to a massive heart attack just a few days later. It was a complete and total shock to all of us!

I was only 4 years old at the time… so, I don't really have any vivid memories of Bee, but in the ensuing years… Mom made sure to tell me all about her! Apparently, my grandmother had a very rough home-life. She was a dedicated Sunday School Teacher, and piano player at her church. She helped people – especially her employees, if they were ever in a bind. She enjoyed listening to the McKamey's Gospel singing group. She always had a cup of coffee in her hand. She loved her family. And I'm told that she lived her life like a true Christian. Jesus was the centerpiece of her life. So, even though she died at a fairly young age… we take comfort in knowing that she was ready to meet the Lord!

I said all of that, to say this… You never know when it's gonna be your time to go! It doesn't matter how old you are, how good your health is, how good of a person you think you are, or how well you've got your life planned out… God calls us home at our appointed time. The Bible says that "… it is appointed once for a man to die, and then the judgment" (Heb. 9:27).

Are you ready? If you died right now, are you sure of your relationship with the Lord? Do you know for sure where you'd spend eternity? If not, here's my encouragement to you… Don't put it off! Drop to your knees, wherever you are, and cry out to Jesus! You are not assured of tomorrow, but He can hear you right now. If you would like to speak further about salvation… please feel free to reach out!

Baptist Women

WOMEN DISCOVER MISSIONAL LIVING IS "BETTER TOGETHER" by Sue Sprenkle, writer for IMB

Michelle Chitwood tilted her head as she slowly looked around the courtyard. The wife of the International Mission Board president wanted to take in every aspect of this pastors' wives tea in Lusaka, Zambia.

At one table, four heads bowed in prayer. A few hours ago, these women — from Michigan, Missouri and Zambia — were strangers but now they clasped hands and poured their hearts out to God about the trials of planting new churches in their communities. Two tables over, an IMB missionary and pastors' wives from Zambia and Michigan mourned over a miscarriage. Another table of older women giggled as their prayers morphed into humorous ministry mishaps during their collective 90 years of service.

These interactions summed up the reason Chitwood and Lynette Ezell, wife of the North American Mission Board's president, co-hosted a short-term mission trip to Zambia for Baptist state executive wives and NAMB missionaries.

"We really are better together," Chitwood said, pointing to the many similarities between ministries despite thousands of miles that normally separate the women. "Spiritual lostness is the greatest problem in North America. It's the greatest problem in Zambia. It's the greatest problem among all the nations.

"When we work together, I think it brings unity," Chitwood said about partnering with NAMB. She explained how being with people in another culture and building relationships will help churches in the U.S. strengthen their commitment to missions.

"This makes you more aware of lostness and a better advocate for our missionaries," Chitwood said.

The team from Arkansas, Georgia, Michigan, Missouri and Virginia worked with ongoing ministries and caught a vision of how their own Southern Baptist churches can develop a closer partnership with the IMB.

For Tara Fowler, Missouri Baptist executive director's wife, working alongside both IMB missionaries and Zambian believers made her excited. She used skills learned as an elementary school principal to lead children in games, teach Bible stories and speak at a Parent Teacher Association meeting.

"This trip has shown me a side of missionary life that I've never seen before," Fowler said. She experienced most of the components of the missionary task — entry, evangelism, discipleship, healthy church formation, leadership development and exit to partnership — in just one week. These six tasks are part of the biblical work of every IMB missionary who introduces the gospel to a people group and then continues to work among them until a healthy church of local believers is ready to carry on the Great Commission task.

The team of women worked with a Zambian church member who used soccer to create gospel access within a community living around the edges of the city trash heaps. They shared the gospel in a hospital ward with someone who had never heard of God's mercy. They discipled teachers and parents. They empowered a young Zambian pastor and his church in reaching their impoverished community through Christ-centered compassion projects. They even witnessed an aspect of "exit to partnership" when the IMB handed over the property title of the local Baptist seminary to the Zambian Baptist Fellowship.

This wide array of ministries was a perfect introduction to the IMB for Mollie Diaz and Marisa Roberson. As NAMB missionaries with their husbands in Michigan their attention is focused stateside. This trip allowed them to see how small churches like their own play a role in reaching the nations.

"I knew of the IMB before but now the blinders have been removed and I see the impact," Roberson said about the experience. "I see the teen boy staying out of trouble and learning about God on the soccer field. I see a group of Zambian church women praying with the sick in a hospital. Most importantly, I see where my church has a role in all of it."

Through giving to the Cooperative Program, Lottie Moon Christmas Offering® and Annie Armstrong Offering®, churches provide financial means for the gospel to spread all around the world. Through sending missionaries and going on short-term mission trips, churches provide the feet for this message to travel and take root. And as Diaz and Roberson pointed out, through churches partnering and praying for each other — like those in Michigan and Zambia — God's work is accomplished.

This vision was exactly what Ezell hoped the women who are focused on work in the U.S. would discover when they rolled up their sleeves and worked side-by-side with IMB missionaries.

"We need one another to get the gospel to all the nations," Ezell said, explaining her passion for both mission agencies. "Southern Baptist churches have a heart for the lost, no matter where they are — next door, another state or country. The Lord calls us to work together."

COLLECTING BLOOD AFTER A HURRICANE HITS IN WESTERN NC

The impacts of Hurricane Helene on Western NC in September 2024 were immense, causing at least 105 reported deaths and significant destruction of homes and infrastructure. It knocked out power and running water for hundreds of thousands. This included the Asheville Blood and Platelet Center, a primary distribution site for blood products used by area hospitals. It was crucial to keep this facility open. The loss of power and water meant that blood could not be kept cold enough to store and transport safely. When Hurricane Helene hit the area, there were 161 units of blood stored at the Asheville Facility that would be lost without power. They coordinated with a team from Charlotte who braved the early parts of the storm and drove for hours detouring around a mudslide which closed off Interstate 40. The team was able to bring the lifesaving blood to another facility where it would be able to weather the storm. Without power and water and not being able to have wet or dry ice, the blood would have been lost.

After the storm hit, power was lost for a week, but the devastating flooding caused severe damage to the water infrastructure of Asheville. Due to sanitary reasons, the Blood Center was unable to operate. The phlebotomists couldn't wash their hands and there was no way to create 18 lbs. of ice per box required to pack 12 units of blood. Plus, the building was converted into a Red Cross Disaster Relief headquarters. They created a plan to get the Blood Center operating again. They ordered a bathroom trailer with hand washing stations, as well as water to operate the facility. They secured vendors who could deliver ice regularly to maintain the necessary temp of 20 F to 24 F. The Blood Center reopened in a mere 10 days after Hurricane Helene struck. Blood Donors immediately answered the call and came in rolling up their sleeves, ready to donate blood.

The need for blood is constant. After what our Western NC neighbors went through, can you find the time to roll up a sleeve and donate blood? Our next Blood Drive is March 18th from 1 - 6 PM in the Multi-Purpose Building. Visit redcrossblood.org and enter RHBC for your appointment. If you need help with your appointment or would like to volunteer, please call Rhonda Bass at 252-337-5766. Thank you!

Would YOU know what to do if someone were to suddenly collapse?

Did you know that 356,000 out-of-hospital cardiac arrests occur every year?

Did you know that 70% of out-of-hospital cardiac arrests occur in the home.

Every minute that passes without CPR and defibrillation, the chances of survival are reduced by 7% - 10%.

Learn CPR - You Have the Power to Save a Life!

RHBC will be having its very first CPR Class on March 25th from 7 - 8:30 PM in the Special Function Room. This will include hands-only CPR (no rescue breaths), operation of AED (Automatic External Defibrillator), and choking. This is not a certification class and is meant only as instructional and hands-on training for laypeople. There is a limit of 10 people in the class. The fee for the class has been waived by the instructor because of our commitment to the American Red Cross Blood Drives. Our instructor is Frank Spruill from the Outer Banks. He was recommended by the American Red Cross and is a certified instructor. He is with OBXCPR, a non-profit with a mission of teaching people how to save lives. If there is interest, a certification class can be arranged at a later date. Please call or text Rhonda Bass at 252-337-5766 if you are interested in this current class of 10 on March 25th.
